

BRECKENRIDGE NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1880.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. S. Wilkerson is at home for a few days. Mr. E. T. Moorhead, of Rockvale, was in the city Friday.

Hon. Lafayette Green, of Falls of Rough, was in the city Sunday.

Mr. Samuel Davidson, of the Falls of Rough, was in the city Saturday.

Miss Jessie Robertson, of Rockvale, was visiting Miss Sallie Moorman last week.

Messrs. Frank Ragdale and J. D. Jarrett, of Stephensport, were in the city Friday.

Hon. W. R. Haynes and wife spent Sunday with the family of Wallace Grotte in this city.

Mr. Eli Dean and wife, Miss Belle Webb and Mr. Jesse Moorman were in the city Wednesday.

Mrs. Dr. Heston, of Leitchfield, is expected here this week to spend a short time visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. John A. Moorman, Miss Nella Dean and Miss Jennie Moorman, of Rock Lick, were in the city during the week.

Mrs. Minnie Moorman, of Rockvale, Breckenridge county, is visiting in our vicinity, the guest of Mrs. A. Moorman.—[Meade County Record.]

Mr. James Hammond and wife, of Dale, Ind., who have been visiting Dr. R. L. Newton and family, returned home Sunday on the Dick Johnson.

Miss Lou Elliott has gone to Louisville to remain during the fall and winter. She is a most estimable young lady, and will be greatly missed by her many friends.

Miss Bettie Oering, Miss Gertrude Slattery and Miss Mary Thornton, three charming young ladies of Haverhill, were passengers on the tourist last Thursday, en route to the Louisville Exposition.

The following persons made the round trip to Cincinnati on the Fashion last week: Dr. R. L. Newton and wife, Mrs. Carrie Cooper, Miss Kate Oglesby, and Messrs. Charles P. Babbage and Jeff Hamblen.

Miss Kate Leitch returned home last Friday, on the Delta, after a visit of several months in Philadelphia, Pa., and will be greatly missed by her many friends.

Miss Lee Bennett, of Stephensport, and Miss Daisy Donnelly, of Canaan, Ind., were passengers on the tourist last Thursday. Miss Donnelly goes to Stephensport to spend a short time with her friend, Miss Lee, and attend the Rome fair.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Rome fair this week.

Circuit court this week.

The weather is delightful.

Owensboro fair next week.

Hickory nuts have appeared in market.

The boys are on their heads about a brass band.

Louisville Conference at Glasgow this week.

Eggs are selling at 10c, with a limited supply.

Master Eugene Vest has invented a patent churn.

Another new suit, and the coat fits. Now for business.

Indiana election next Tuesday. Hurrah for Landers.

Green apples appear to be something of a drug on the market.

A skurry of rain Sunday night, accompanied by high winds.

The new business houses show up handsomely from the river.

After some child has gone through the bridge it will be too late to fix it.

T. N. Vessels & Bro. have opened a saloon in Jarrett's Hotel, Stephensport.

Hon. Heston, of the Fashion, handles a baby with as much grace and ease as an old woman.

The Fashion on her last trip up was full of people and freight. Fashion is the word here.

The Grey Eagle was grounded sixteen hours on Pappy Creek bar Monday of last week.

The secret of perfect health is invariably found by those who take "Sellers' Liver Pills."

The river is awfully low, and the packets are almost as uncertain as a Cloverport radical barbeque.

Who said that one of the young ladies now absent in Louisville was making up her wedding trousseau?

Tumors, erysipelas, rheumatic diseases, scrofula, and general debility cured by "Dr. Lindsay's Blood Searcher."

T. C. Lewis & Co., of Hardinsburg, jewelers and watchmakers, have new time pieces on hands. Try them.

Messrs. J. S. Lightfoot and S. D. Alexander left Monday with a drove of horses and mules for the Louisville market.

Mr. James Montgomery, democratic elector for this district, made a speech at Hardinsburg last Monday afternoon.

Mr. John Corley shipped on the C. W. Anderson, last Wednesday, nineteen head of hogs and three head of cattle.

Dr. Kurtz shipped on the Fashion, last Wednesday, five head of fine horses, and David Oglesby four head of cattle.

Mr. John Talbot, an old and esteemed citizen of this county, residing near Big Spring, died at his residence October 3.

Street supervisor McPherson had his forces at work on the hill the latter days of last week, and did a nice job on Hartford street.

The M. E. Conference, which was in session at Hardinsburg last week, closed its labors Sunday night. We have not been favored with a report of its proceedings.

Col. Jno. H. McHenry, secretary of the Owensboro Fair Association, will please accept our thanks for a complimentary ticket of admission to its annual exhibition next week.

M. Hamman has the Genuine Twin Bed Springs, made of the best Bessemer steel, which he will sell on your beds for $3. A set consists of sixty springs, warranted of the best steel.

Judge McBeath, we understand, proposes to revive the old custom of making the commonwealth's attorney instruct the grand jury. Nothing like making him earn his salt, you know.

A Georgia journal says that the water-melon is the most generous of vegetables, because it has so much heart. And the onion is the most selfish, because it always sheds other's tears than its own.

Mr. Vick Cully will please accept our thanks for some of the handsomest and best-colored apples we ever saw. He calls them Hancock and Greening apples. They are of the Rhode Island Greening variety.

We can't congratulate the ladies on the style of their hats and bonnets this fall. They are not at all pretty or becoming. The men have decidedly the advantage both in the style of their hats and the cut of their clothes.

Isn't it about time for that witty, genial and entertaining little band of noble workers to make its debut in the interests of fall charities? Surely it will not rest with its already accumulated list of honors, but go on in its good work.

The Vessels Bros. have secured the booth privileges of the Hardinsburg fair, and propose to supply all creation with everything in the edible and bibulous line that man's nature demands and woman's appetite craves. They are a fine set of fellows and know how to keep a booth hot.

It will be seen from their announcement in another column, that Messrs. J. A. Witt and A. M. Palliam have entered into a co-partnership for the transaction of a mercantile business at Hardinsburg. We do not know of a stronger and more liberal firm in the county, and have no doubt of its success from the very start.

Mr. Joseph Clayton, of New Albany, Ind., a most excellent painter, has removed to our city with his family, and set up house-keeping in the Bartles building. He is a sober, industrious man, and just such as we are glad to welcome as a citizen. We hope that he may find it both pleasant and profitable to be a resident of Cloverport.

We are pleased to learn of the good fortune of our charming young friend, Miss Jennie Keith, at Brandenburg, who is an assistant teacher in the high school there. She has been examined and granted a first-class, first grade, certificate as teacher, and we understand that four of the trustees are anxious to advance her to the position of first assistant teacher. Brains will tell.

During the past few days our job-office has turned out an attractive half-sheet poster for the enterprising firm of Webster, merchants, E. H. Smith & Bro. The Messrs. Smith are intelligent men, who do not fear to smear their business liberally with printer's ink, and the consequence is that they have a larger trade than any half-dozen of our competitors in the county. They are full of the wisdom that accumulates with age. They know that the royal road to riches passes right through the printer's ink keg.

Mr. Jubal Hook and wife, of Hardinsburg, came up on the Rainbow, Monday. This was a case of runaway marriage. Miss Nannie Tate was the bride's maiden name. She lives in Hardinsburg and she in the vicinity. They loved and wanted to marry. Her parents were obstinate. Love is impatient and generally has things its own way. She came down to visit relatives and friends about a week ago. Sunday morning he made his appearance, gathered her on his arm, boarded the train, and they were off. The bridegroom was not to be deterred by the indiscreet. The bride was not to be deterred by the indiscreet. The bride was not to be deterred by the indiscreet.

You may not read it in printed book, or hear it where wisecracks prate, But when true love has a chance to speak, It is never known to hesitate.

Last week Mr. H. C. Cull invaded our house and affixed the patent Twin Bed Springs to a couple of our beds. That night we never slept with greater comfort and ease and satisfaction. Indeed, our sleep was repose in its most exalted sense. They are noiseless, elastic, and absolutely faultless. We would not do without them, now that we have experienced their comfort, for four times the amount of their cost. It is Mr. Cull's intention to thoroughly canvass the county, and we can do cheerfully testify to their value, and heartily recommend them to our people as the best bed springs ever used. We have a mattress we had made to order at a cost of $65, and honestly we would not give a $5 set of the Twin Bed Springs for a dozen like it.

Eleven colored republican voters were crossed into Indiana one night not long ago, from the bottom above town, and a deputy U. S. internal revenue collector, who resides in Louisville, was the chap (assisted by a prominent white republican of this city) who piloted them across. Fortunately they were seen and recognized, and the names and descriptions of the negroes were forwarded to Indianapolis, and three worthy young democrats of Polk's Kentucky, were arrested from their beds and followed the darkies to their destination. We are safe in predicting that not one of them will be permitted to vote, and we seriously doubt whether all of them will ever see old Kentucky again, for our democratic friends in Louisville have no objection to the determination to warn all illegal voters to stay away from the polls, and if they disregard the warning, to kill them before allowing them to rob them of their right to govern their own state. And they are right. Every colored man who dares to desert from a republican, who attempts to cast an unlawful vote in Indiana, ought to be shot down like a sheep-killing dog.

The new American Newspaper Directory of Geo. P. Rowell & Co. is a volume of more than a thousand pages, and the most elaborate and complete work of the kind by states and in alphabetical order, is such as to make reference easy, and besides, there is, for every town in which a newspaper is published, a statement of location, population, lines of communication, and distinguishing characteristics that is very valuable information to everybody in general nature. The mechanical execution of the work would be a credit to any publisher in this country. It has been a delicate and responsible task, without personal acquaintance, and sometimes without reliable communication, to embody in convenient form statistics which the business public was clearly entitled to, and yet avoid collision with the interests of a class of newspaper publishers who would, either from mistaken notions of policy, or with fraudulent intent, withhold this information. They have shown admirable independence and determination in the prosecution of their task; but as was inevitable, they have incurred the displeasure of some who don't know why, and more whose attempts to wrangle in the matter of circulation have been to some extent thwarted. In an age when knavery is so prevalent an honest man is often compelled to choose between his own conscience and some of the highest moral pretenses, whom he will serve, in other matters than publishing Newspaper Directories.

More Indian Belles. We are in receipt of two more Indian belles from our Arizona correspondent, "Twit." He desires to deliver to two of those who solved his enigmas. They consist of an Indian "Virgin" and a miniature papoose-basket. The latter we will award to a bright little boy on Long Lick, or somewhere in that region (we have mislaid his letter and can not recall his name, but think he is the son of a physician now there) who solved an enigma some time ago for which a prize was offered by the author and which he never received. Let him send in his letter, and he is entitled to it, as he has the second to send in a solution. As to the image of the Virgin, several young ladies sent solutions which arrived by the same mail. Of course we can not make any selection between them. Guess we will have to make them earn it. The one who will send us the best practical recipe for making "Egg cornbread" (not copied from a cook-book), for publication, will receive the image. Now, girls, sweat yourselves. These trinkets were manufactured by members of the Chiricahua band of Indians now held as captives at San Carlos Agency.

A Happy Clergyman. Rev. E. F. L. Gauss, of Dallas, Tex.: "I have been a great sufferer from kidney disease, and after being told by my doctors that I was incurable, I commenced the use of Dr. KIDNEY PILLS, which has now completely cured me. I am strong and again look the very picture of health. May all the suffering be helped as I have been, is my earnest wish."

A MODEL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Giddy Gid Jolly and W. A. Barton Assembled in County Convention at Hardinsburg.

The republican readers of the News will be astonished to learn that their party held a county convention at Hardinsburg on the 23d ult., but it is nevertheless a solemn fact. There were only two delegates present, Giddy Gid Jolly and W. A. Barton. The republican party of Breckenridge, were it to please the Almighty ruler of the destinies of men to transfer Gideon to another party, and we hope better—sphere, in his position would be enclosed the republican party of the county, and in his grave would lie his corpse be buried. But to our stenographic report of this remarkable convention.

At eleven o'clock a. m. to the minute, the republican party, assembled with Mr. W. A. Barton, invaded the court-house. The republican party was sadly humming the lively old hymn, "Thou art gone to the grave," and Mr. Barton softly whistling a bar from "We parted by the riverside." Once inside the court-house, the proposed to deprecate the republican party opened its mouth and spoke.

"I move that Mr. Barton take the cheer if there be no objection."

No objection being heard, Mr. Barton brushed the seat of his pants with the palm of his right hand and took the "cheer," thanking the republican party of Breckenridge county for the unexpected and [this with becoming modesty] undeserved honor conferred upon him by presiding over so distinguished a gathering. [Applause by Giddy Gid Jolly, so intelligent [cheers by Gid Jolly], so patriotic a body of citizens [Vociferous applause by G. P. Jolly]. He then announced that the convention was ready to proceed to business.

Whereupon Mr. Gideon P. Jolly sprang to his feet and shouted:

"I move that the cheer appoint a secretary of this convention."

The chair put the motion which was voted for by Mr. Gid Jolly, and the chair announced that it was adopted unanimously.

"I move," said Mr. G. P. Jolly, who obtained the floor by herculean effort, "that the chair appoint a committee on resolutions."

This motion was also carried by the vote of Mr. Gid Jolly.

The chair appointed Messrs. G. Perry Jolly, Gideon P. Jolly and Gid Jolly said committee.

After retiring for about the hundredth part of a second to the breast-pocket of Mr. Gideon P. Jolly, the committee returned to daylight and presented the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we, the republicans of Breckenridge county, considering the lateness of the call and that a candidate brought out at this late date in the county would be a severe and certain defeat as well as certain loss of money, time and labor, it is

Resolved, That we deem it inexpedient and unwise under all the circumstances to hold such a convention.

Resolved, That we believe no one would be willing to make the race without a chance of success, and that we believe no one would be willing to resort to the draft for our candidates, particularly when we so well know that there is not time for such candidate to publish on the stump, and that the good old party platform, his own and the republican principles in every county of the district.

Resolved, that in declining to appoint delegates to said convention, yet if the same is held, we will be found as heretofore giving him our support.

After considerable, and at times heated and acrimonious discussion participated in by Messrs. Gideon P. Jolly, G. Perry Jolly, G. P. Jolly and Gid Jolly, the resolutions were adopted, and the convention adjourned sine die.

A WOMAN'S PISTOL.

An Enraged Wife Attempts to Kill Her Ailing Slanderer—Two Snaps of a Pistol and a Clean Pair of Hairs.

Last Thursday the good people that inhabit the greenback wilderness around and about Marlow's Mill, in Hancock county, were thrown into unwonted commotion by the attempt of Mrs. Monroe Marlow to shoot a young man named Joseph Rosenberg, who is now at the detention house, under the following circumstances:

It appears that Rosenberg has been telling it around among his cronies that he had been on several occasions criminally intimate with Mrs. Marlow, and this boasting was so constant and so brazen, that the husband, who is a republican, who attempts to cast an unlawful vote in Indiana, ought to be shot down like a sheep-killing dog.

Of course Mr. Marlow immediately sought his wife and demanded an explanation from her. She denied Rosenberg's story most bitterly and vowed that she would never see her husband again. Rosenberg, armed with a revolver, she took her station by the side of the path Rosenberg had to pursue in going from the mill to his boarding-house, Thursday at noon, and when he came up opposite to her, stepped out from her concealment and thrusting the muzzle of the pistol in his face pulled the trigger. The cap exploded without discharging the weapon.

Again she essayed a shot only to fail as before. By this time Rosenberg realized that it was dangerous to be so near her, and he turned and fled. She followed him, and before the enraged and outraged woman could make the third and fatal attempt at perforating him with lead, he took to his heels and got out of sight and range. He was in this city Thursday night, and stayed in Jack Marlow's mill, under the following circumstances:

We deem it but an act of justice to Mrs. Marlow to state that her reputation has always been irreproachable, and all who know her believe Rosenberg to be a foul slanderer. We understand that he is a notorious forger, and a receiver of stolen goods from almost every good-looking woman and girl in the community in which he lives, and such being the case, it is to be regretted that Mrs. Marlow's weapon played her false.

Death of an Old Settler.

Mr. John D. Bates died at his residence in this county, about eight miles from town, at 5 o'clock last Wednesday morning, September 29, in the 80th year of his age. Mr. Bates had spent pretty much all of his life in this county, if he was not born here, and was a kindly, good old gentleman, well known and respected by every body. There are some remarkable coincidences connected with death in his family worth mentioning. It will be observed that he died on the 29th day of the month, at 5 o'clock in the morning. On the 29th day of July, he lost a daughter-in-law, who expired at the same hour. On the 29th of November another daughter-in-law died, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon—thus all three dying on the same day of the month, and when the clock was on the stroke of 5.

Chicago.

The sales of Bromoline in the city of Chicago, last year, was thousands upon thousands of bottles. Chicago is a first-class city. Bromoline is a first-class medicine. Do you see the point? If Bromoline had not been a good medicine for the Blood and Liver, the leading citizens of Chicago would not endorse it by using it as a family medicine. We mention Chicago, particularly, it being a Western city and Bromoline a Western medicine. When your Blood is out of order, your appetite gone, you feel weary and listless, then try Bromoline and be helped. Trial bottles free. Regular size $1. For sale by A. R. Fisher, Cloverport, Ky.

Willard Hotel Lottery.

I am agent for the sale of tickets in this splendid scheme, in which $350,000 in valuable property (including the Willard Hotel as it stands), other valuable real estate, and the like, will be distributed by lot on Dec. 31, 1880. Tickets $5; halves $1; quarters $2. (ads-1f) W. W. NEWCOM.

For Sale. The house and lot in Cloverport, Ky. known as the Wilkerson property. Persons wishing a desirable residence on reasonable terms, will do well to call on my agent, Mr. John D. Gregory, at Cloverport. (ads-1f) GEO. B. EXALL, Guardian.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEART.

Unprovoked Murder of Julian Phelps by LaRue House at Hardinsburg.

On Saturday the 24th ult., the greenbackers of that portion of Butler county surrounding the village of Lambastown, perpetrated a heinous act at that place. Among the guests was Julian E. Phelps and his cousin, LaRue House. Some time ago House became involved in a lawsuit with James N. Phelps, a brother to LaRue, and was worried in the courts. Ever since he seems to have lived a bitter spite against every member of the Phelps family, and never met one of them without provoking a personal difficulty. But as he was known to be a dangerous man, and always "heeled" for any emergency, they were rather shy of him and never gave him an opportunity to test his skill as a marksman on any of their persons. But Saturday gave him the chance he had long sought, and he was not slow to avail himself of it. The following particulars of the terrible tragedy he had enacted, is furnished us by a correspondent at Rochester:

House, who had been drinking somewhat, met Phelps during the morning, and began to talk about the lawsuit with his brother. Phelps refused to converse with him on the subject, saying that he had nothing to do with the lawsuit and cared nothing about it. "Yes," said House, "I had a brother who'd go on the stand and swear to a d—d lie like Jim Phelps did, I don't want to talk about either." This angered Phelps, who declared that he should not talk about his brother in that style. This started a war of words in which both parties cursed each other, and a collision was prevented at the time by the bystanders. Phelps was led to some distance by a friend, and they seated themselves on the roof of a tree to talk the matter over. Phelps picking up a stick upon which he began whittling with his pocket-knife.

House followed them up, still cursing and abusing Phelps, and was engaged in conversation with him, the latter paid no attention, until House applied an epithet to him which contained a reflection upon his mother. Phelps arose to his feet and as he reached an erect position, House, who had his pistol in his hand, fired at him, and the ball striking Phelps' heart and producing instant death. An officer who was present—a constable—attempted to arrest the murderer, but desisted when the desperate man opened fire on him, one ball penetrating his clothing and grazing his arm. House, having been hit, hastily backed to where his horse was hitched, holding the unarmed crowd at bay with his weapon, and mounted the animal and made his escape.

THE DEADLY SHOTGUN.

At the Seelye Coal Mines, Ohio County, John Brown's son killed his father.

John Harris lives—by John Brown did live until Tuesday evening of last week, a deadly feud between a couple of miles below the village of Cromwell, on the Green River. Harris is a sober, industrious and reputable man, not given to quarreling, and the last person to voluntarily start or participate in a difficulty. John Brown was just the opposite of all that. He was a strong drink, hot-headed and impulsive, and was as fond of fighting as a coon is of crawfish.

Tuesday Brown was drinking, and a short while after dinner sprang a quarrel on Harris, at which the latter was provoked, and he finally hid him to go off and let him alone, as he wanted no difficulty, and did not propose to fight if he could avoid it without a display of cowardice. Brown was taken off by some of his friends, but was free and frequent with his shots and arrows, and made many but unavailing efforts to procure a gun or pistol with which to execute the threats. Friends carried Harris tidings of Brown's threats and acts, and as the latter was known to be an exceedingly dangerous character, he was advised to prepare himself to defend his life. His preparation amounted to a double-barreled shotgun charged with buckshot.

About dark the parties met on the open hillside, and Harris, armed with his shotgun and Brown with a murderous looking knife in his hand. Harris warned his desperate enemy not to approach him, but the warning was unheeded, and Brown made no halt but continued advancing. Whereupon Harris fired, and the shot struck Brown in the contents of one barrel into Brown's breast, producing instant death. The dead man, when found by parties attracted by the report of the gun, and who had a pretty accurate idea of what had occurred, had his knife tightly clutched in his right hand, and Harris had not been arrested at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent at Cromwell wrote us the above particulars, but it seemed to be the universal opinion of the community in which the tragedy was enacted that he was compelled to slay Brown in order to preserve his own life and his remaining barrel will be only a legal formality at the time our correspondent